Comments: Forget Disney's version of Alice in Wonderland, this is a new take on the story. Meet Royal Bodyguard Hatter Madigan. In 2.5, you will learn about Hatter's travels around the world, that at one time he even stood at the foot of the Great Pyramid, you will learn what alchemite is and you will also learn that his hat may be a living entity, that it has a conscious force. The artwork is gothic and dark and you feel like you stepped into London's foggy mist and Hatter M is a just man, but for some reason he still gives me the creeps and reminds me of a lighter side of Jack the Ripper. Especially with all of his blades. The man is lethal! He can fly like a bat, but is scared of cats, especially the demonic Cheshire cat. I love all the gadgets that Hatter M has at his disposal. You get the scoop on Baroness Dvonna who is involved in a mind control cult. In the meantime Hatter M is busy trying to rescue Princess Alyss. Things only get weirder as Alyss' mother watches over her from the other side of the Looking Glass. Beddor & Cavalier has taken the venerable concepts of Lewis Carroll, and with superb characterization, pacing and language, combined them into a seamless story of compelling power. A major fantasy story with intriguing plot developments by any reasonable standards!
